Virginia Health Officials Tell Doctors to Stop Prescribing Raccoons as Emotional Support Animals

The Winchester Gazette

Virginia health officials issued an unusual but urgent advisory after doctors in several counties reportedly attempted to list wild raccoons as Emotional Support Animals. The state clarified that ESAs must be safe, domesticated species—and that raccoons pose significant risks, including rabies exposure, unpredictable behavior, and legal liabilities.

This timely reminder helps keep ESA guidelines clear while protecting both patients and wildlife.

Why this matters for NoVA: Misunderstandings about ESA rules are increasingly affecting local clinics, housing offices, and landlords, making clear guidance essential to protect both residents and animals from unsafe or illegal practices.

Therapy Dog Certification Test Essentials

Therapy dog certification helps ensure that dogs and their handlers are prepared, safe, and effective when providing comfort and emotional support in a variety of settings. Below is an updated 2026 overview of major certification programs, visit-based recognition, health & safety requirements, and practical guidance for selecting the best path for your dog and team.

- Certification isn't automatic – it requires formal evaluation. Dogs must demonstrate consistent obedience, stable temperament, and the ability to work calmly and safely around unfamiliar people and environments.
- Training foundations matter. Most certifying organizations expect teams to complete baseline skills such as AKC Canine Good Citizen (CGC) before advancing to therapy-specific evaluations.
- Handler + dog = a team. Certification focuses not just on the dog, but on how well the handler reads, supports, and manages the dog in real-world settings.
- Health, grooming, and behavior standards are non-negotiable. Certified therapy dogs must meet strict hygiene requirements, maintain vaccinations, and present reliably gentle, predictable behavior.
- Ongoing commitment is required. Certification must be renewed, visits logged, and standards upheld – therapy work is a continuous responsibility, not a one-time test.

the surrounding areas of Northern Virginia

Manassas Therapy Dogs began in 2003 with just one dog and one lady. The founder, Shirley Way, and her Pembroke Welsh Corgi "Dilly", composed the first therapy dog team in our local area. Since those humble beginnings, Manassas Therapy Dogs has grown to over 50 dog teams and serve the Manassas area and beyond. All Manassas Therapy Dog teams are certified through the Alliance of Therapy Dogs.

Where Creativity Meets Compassion

Licensing a dog in Arlington could get easier someday.

A January refresher for therapy dog handlers, service dog teams, and ESA owners across Northern Virginia.

- 1. Know Your Dog's Legal Role.
Therapy dogs, service dogs, and ESAs each have different rights – knowing them prevents conflict.
- 2. Public Access Laws Are Not Universal.
Service dogs have ADA access; therapy dogs enter by invitation; ESAs receive housing protections only.
- 3. Only Two Questions May Be Asked.
Staff may ask if your dog is a service animal and what task it performs – nothing else.
- 4. Housing Rules Differ from ADA.
ESAs are protected under the FHA even in “no pets” housing, without breed or fee restrictions.
- 5. Documentation Helps – Diplomacy Helps More.
Calm communication and organized records resolve most issues faster than citing laws.

IRS Dependent Debate: Pets?

A lawyer is suing the IRS, arguing pets should qualify as legal dependents. It's not the law today—but it's an interesting snapshot of how fast the legal conversation around companion animals is evolving.
